

The Iolanthe Midwifery Trust

Guidance for completing applications for the Dora Opoku Student Award for Black and Brown Students

Introduction to the Dora Opoku Student Award

The Dora Opoku Student Award helps a Black or Brown pre-registration midwifery student with the costs of attending a study day or taking up elective placements. Black and Brown student applicants are also automatically considered for an Iolanthe Student Award to maximise their chances of receiving an award.

The Dora Opoku Student Award at a glance
Amount Granted	Maximum £1,000 (single award)
When to Apply	Applications open on 1 Dec 2024 and close on 1 February 2025 . The award winner will be announced in late May 2025.
Eligibility Criteria	For Black and Brown students on a UK pre-registration course.
Timing	For projects starting after 1 January 2025 and completed by May 2026.

What type of projects and research are suitable?

- Courses to gain skills or knowledge relevant to your student midwifery practice.
- Travel and attendance at relevant study days or conferences.
- Small research projects to improve local maternity services. In this case it is important to have the written support of an academic supervisor, mentor or NHS midwifery manager who can confirm that you have the capability and/or opportunity to achieve this.
- Elective midwifery placements. These awards provide an opportunity for students who wish to experience a model of care different to that available in the area in which they study.
- Return to Practice midwives can also apply for a Student Award for associated costs. To be eligible, they need to have been accepted on an NMC approved RfP course and have the support of an NHS Trust or Board for practice hours.

Travel and location of award work

The Iolanthe Midwifery Trust does consider funding projects involving international travel. The Iolanthe Midwifery Trust does consider projects involving international travel. Consideration will be given to overseas placements where there are clear learning objectives which demonstrate a view to maintaining ongoing partnership and collaborative working which is mutually beneficial. However applicants should be aware of the following stipulations:

- Priority will be given to projects taking place in the four nations of the UK;

- Student midwives are encouraged to seek elective placements in a part of the UK that presents a contrast to (or builds upon) their prior experience, for example in urban areas, rural areas or within specific communities.
- We do not fund placements with commercial travel organisations such as ‘Work the World’;
- Where overseas work is funded, the charity would be looking for applications that:
 - Demonstrate a consideration of the ethical issues that may arise from overseas award activity;
 - Identify specific career development goals that will be met by the overseas award activity;
 - Demonstrate cultural familiarity and an ongoing relationship with the intended location, or detailed plans to develop this;
 - Show how the award activity would fall within any university or organisational travel restrictions;
 - Demonstrate an intention to meaningfully engage, learn and develop during the overseas award activity. Longer placements are more likely to be funded than shorter ‘observation’ placements.
 - Demonstrate how learning from the award activity will be disseminated to other midwives, student midwives or health practitioners in the UK.

Conference attendance

The Iolanthe Midwifery Trust is able to fund conference attendance. However applicants should be aware of the following stipulations:

- Priority will be given to conferences taking place within the four nations of the UK;
- Priority will be given to those presenting their work at a conference rather than attending the conference as a delegate;
- Applicants need to give a rationale for choosing a particular conference and the specific career development goals that will be met by attending;
- Applicants need to demonstrate how others will also benefit from their attendance at the intended conference. This might include clear plans to disseminate the learning to other midwives, student midwives or health practitioners.

A Guide to Writing a Good Application

	What goes wrong?	How to improve your chances of getting funding
The purpose of the application	Too little information about the proposed course, project or elective visit	Clearly justify your choice of project or placement and tell us what makes it worthwhile or innovative. For UK electives, make sure you have identified an institution or person to visit and made contact with them. A supporting letter from the host institution also benefits the application. Identify how this will benefit the wellbeing of mothers/parents and/or babies – in the case of electives, consider this both locally and where the elective will take place. Projects which address health inequalities for ethnic communities or target vulnerable groups are also viewed more positively.
Benefits from the funding	Not giving enough thought about how you, your fellow students, future employers, the midwifery profession, maternity services and women/families will benefit.	Spell out the benefits of your project to yourself and others (parents and babies, other students, and the profession and/or current or future employer). Explain how you will share your experience or the knowledge that you gain. Give details of what you hope to learn as a result and how that can be achieved with the planned project.
Costs	Including excessive, irrelevant or personal costs Not being clear in your project description about what the money will be spent on	Give detailed well-researched costs with a brief justification for why these are included. Include precise details on what the money will be spent on in the section describing your project. Don't include personal costs which you are not expecting to get funded (e.g. holiday excursion). Provide evidence of other fundraising – we view this positively as a sign of commitment.
The overall quality of the application	Missing out sections and applications which are too long and unfocused. Applications which don't convey conviction or interest.	Make sure your application is complete, well presented and readable. Use the word counts to help focus the information. Reference your application with research or policy if appropriate but not excessively.

		Write with feeling and persuasion.
Support and commitment.	Not enough evidence of support to do the project.	Please ensure you give those people providing a supporting letter enough notice. Supporting information cannot be added after the application deadline. A supporting letter from your educational institution is included. If possible, ask for a personal reference rather than a standard letter. Other support or funding is acknowledged. Provide evidence that you are committed to undertaking the course, project or elective. A supporting letter from the elective site is included, if applicable.
